With G. E. Mortimore

DELICIOUS wild berries of many sorts grew near the road, in full view of numbers of people walking by, and yet nobody stopped to pick them.

"There's a sure sign of prosperity, that people can't be bethered to pick berries." I said to four-year-old John. "What's posperty, Daddy?" he inquired. "Pick year-old John.

"What's posperty, Daddy?" he inquired. "Pick a berry for me."

I didn't try to answer the question, but I reached down a fat-owange-golden salmonberry and handed it to the boy, who made short work of it and demanded more.

"Pick your own." I said. We rustled farther into the bushes. I relented and picked a few for the boy, because they were beyond his reach.

Salmonberries have a way of concealing themselves behind leaves. But they were worth looking for. The berries are of two kinds: one a bright salmon-yellow and the other orange-red with understones of yellow and orange, and a bloom on them, as though they were made of wax.

I'm no botanist, but I'm a berry eater from a long way back, and to my taste the salmon-berry is one of the finest things that grows.

Not everyone likes the flavor of the salmon-berry, and this fact increases my enjoyment of the berry, because I am thereby allowed to think of myself as a connoisseur among berry-eaters, with a finer palate than the mob has.

The salmon-berry's wild sweet-sour tang brings memories of childhood and country places. The berry seems to taste of the bush.

When we ran out of salmon-berries we moved along the road to bramble-blackberries, sweet and rich-tasting; and dusty-appearing blackcaps, which remind me of raspherries which married into the wrong family and never lived it down.

They have a faintly decadent taste. The same can be said of saskatoons, which we found in a small patch farther along.

Purple-mouthed, the boy and I parted reluctantly from the berries, climbed into the car and waited for mother and the younger boy.

There still are a lot of berries left, and it's an easy place to reach, little more than 15 miles from back to get them myself.

New Leave Centre

HEARTY congratulations are due to those who sponsored and have worked hard for the opening of a bigger and better Armed Forces Leave Centre in Victoria next month. There were few improvements more needed, to take care of the off-duty time of service personnel in this, a garrison town. The existing centre on Government Street has given good service, but the new quarters on Broad Street will be much larger and afford a variety of facilities for men on leave. More than half of the funds needed to consummate the change-over have been raised, and there can be little doubt the balance will be forthcoming without any difficulty. The enlarged centre will provide showers, changing rooms, lockers, a coffee bar and entertainment for service men free from their ships or other stations. There will be resident staff on stations. There will be resident stati on duty, and the leave centre is to be operated on a continuous basis around the clock. For men who in many instances are strangers here and far away from their homes, such an off-duty headquarters can be a godsend. The need for such standing facilities was recognized in the First World War and subsequently when it was met initially by the operation of Prince Robert House. When that closed there was an awkward gap for some years, until another leave centre was developed in embryo. Now it has grown up, outgrown its shell and must move to more commodious premises.

A point worth noting is that the new leave centre with its improved accommodation and facilities will still require the sympathetic backing of the community as a whole, and on an active level. There is much that can be done to expand Victoria's welcome for men in uniform while they are off duty. The operation of such a centre makes such contacts possible. The social and entertainment side of the yent the community. The result should be

The Defence Dollar

ONE of the planks of the Conservatives in the recent election was economy. It is easier to voice economy in opposition than it is to practice it in office, but there can be small doubt that waste and extravagance exist in federal adminis-The annual report of the auditor general to Parliament bears ample testi-mony to this effect. One realm of federal budgeting where strict scrutiny would probably pay off is in defence outlays. The national budget devotes about a third of the whole to the armed forces themselves it would be strange if this were not a fertile field for economy. Often enough there has been wonder if the country has been getting full value for its defence dollar, and legiti-mate doubts expressed by individuals in a position to know. Weapons, equipment, military materials of all-kinds—these are expensive obligations in the world today which cannot be shirked. The can be loosely handled, however.

can be loosely handled, however.

Apparently one of the first tasks of Defence Minister Pearkes since his return from the London Commonwealth talks will be to review with his staff chiefs the whole military setup. He has already said that no drastic changes in strategic planning are contemplated, although it would be no surprise if something of this sort came later. But when it comes to sheer spending that is another matter. sort came later. But when it comes to sheer spending that is another matter. His own military knowledge should stand him in good stead when examining the division of the defence dollar. In a defence budget of $1,726,000,000 there should be as many opportunities for saving as for waste.

Counting the Decibels

an open air entertainment in the environs of Victoria was turned up too-high in volume. The pleasant words of a master of ceremonies were carried over a master of ceremonies were carried over a square mile section of the community with all of the vehemence of a bull-throated roar. The successive portions of the program, instrumental and vocal, had a similarly wide distribution and similarly unfortunate disproportion to any normal sounds. What the result may have been for an audience in front of the microphone is anyone's guess. What it was for residents living half a mile away was a downright nuisance which continued for a level hour.

The daylight noises of any urban community are much the same anywhere, munity are much the same anywhere, depending upon the size of the population and its activities. One can clock the rise in decibels — the unit measurement of sound — as the hours advance from dawn Io noon, and so on to the "rush" periods of the day. By twilight the decibels have begun to fall again, and at midnight in most instances one can hear even a pocket watch ticking several feet away. All that is normal and expected. What is not normal, and something for which there is no valid excuse, is a public address microphone tuned up so that it blankets microphone tuned up so that it blankets all other sounds in a square mile principally occupied by homes.

In this case a large hospital was close to the centre of the area affected. What it must be like to die to the accompaniment of bedlam, or even to come into the world to such a raucous welcome, may be left to the imagination. A little more forethought by those in charge of the arrangement of such events would seem to be in order.

Profits

The accumulation of profit is not the only responsibility of businessmen. POPULARLY - HELD opinion Imagine, if you can, the chagrin of these people when they found the salmon fishing here a complete flop; the pools of the "western" rivers were so crowded and the fish so disturbed by ignorant and careless "sportsmen" that hooking a fish was practically impossible.

Experienced anglers devoted to their summer pastine have given up the early rivers in disgust, and are now banking on less accessible rivers to provide the rapture of landing the king of the game fish. They have bought very costly equip ment to enjoy their sport, and will spend more for the other services associated with salmon-fishing.

In some cases salmon have cost the angler as much as $100 per fish, a position having no relative seniority of an ensign which by intention, law, and accepted use, is knewn internationally as the colors of a British merchant ship. The dominating upper canton of this ensign consists of the Union Flag, emblematic of the union in 1801—of the English, Irish, and Scottish parliaments. Everyone in England and Canada knows that the Canadian parliament is not subject to the parliament of Britain — why then hoist false colors?

To avow our witting attlance with Britain and the Commonwealth, I consider, is commendable and honorable. However, to obscure identity while stating our affiliations — as advocates of the Red Ensign would have us do — under false heraldic implications, is an insult not only to the independent desires of Canadians, but to those to whom we pledge allegiance.

Let the strength of our allegiance speak for itself, but let our flag stand for OUR country, CANADA!

The Missing Flags

We all talk about the weather but nothing has been done

We all talk about the weather but nothing has been done about it.

We also talk about patriotism in an equally vague way, but nothing has been done about that.

Dominion Day passed as many other days special to Canada have passed, with hardly a flag flying; so that one of our many visitors from the United States felt-constrained to exclaim, "Dominion Day! but where are your flags?"

We have a beautiful flag, the Red Ensign with a coat of arms incorporating the Maple Leaf with emblems of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland.

This flag was authorized by His Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council. A committee was appointed for the purpose of enquiring into and reporting upon the advisability of requesting His Majesty the King to assign armstrial hearings to Canada.

On the 20th of April. 1921, said committee submitted to His Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council the device which was subsequently approved by Royal Proclamation on the 21st of Nov., 1921.

Why the Indifference?

On Friday, June 28, 1987, 16 men and women became Canadian citizens in Victoria. His Honor Judge J. B. Clerihue reminded these men and women they had come "to be inaugurated as citizens of what we all believe is the best and most progressive nation of the world." Canadia is an independent nation of the world.

On June 30, 1937, on the grounds of the Parliament Buildings, was held "I am a Canadian" citizenship ceremonies. Does it not seem strange to these new citizens as well as to Canadians of three generations that we have not a "Canadian Flag?" Why the indifference to a Canadian flag typically our own?

No Insult to Nationality

Mr. Morton's suggestion on national flag to me appears rather revolutionary at this slage of our existence. The British Commonwealth of Nations has for generations accepted the Union Jack as a symbol of their united front, not as an insuit to their nationality.

Has not the French-Canadian received every consideration from her former antagonist, They have held the reins of Canada's federal government in their hands for a decade, dictating Canadian affairs at home and abroad. The Union Jack has caused them no humiliation. Then take what used to be British India; those splendid people the Sikhs, Ghurkas, and Indian army in general. They were not ashamed to fight under the Union Jack. Now of course they have their own independence, being a whole separate country.

Why not assume that the Union Jack is as much Cana-dian as British; eurely we Canadians have achieved that

Wages Chase Prices

Many well-intentioned people seem alarmed over the idea that high wages are causing high prices or inflation and that workers should moderate their wage demands. A study of economics and statistics might induce them to arrive at a different conclusion.

Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures seem to indicate that the national income has risen to 235 from a standard of 100 in the last 10 years. At the same time the wages of the individual worker have risen by only 198 from 100.
"A struggle for a rise of wages follows only in the track of previous changes, and is the necessary offspring of previous changes, and is the necessary offspring of previous changes, in the amount of production, the productive powers of labor, the value of labor, the value of money, the Intensity of labor, the fluctuation of market prices dependent with the different phases of the industrial cycle; in a word, the production of labor, the reactions of labor against previous action of earlist."

with the different phases of the industrial cycle; in a word, #s reactions of labor against previous action of capital."
Which implies, among other things, that prises don't chase wages, but the very reverse, wages are chasing prices.
No permanent solution can be found within the framework of the present social system. It will take common ownership of the machinery of production, and for use, to de that.

Birthday Celebrations on Same Day

Two English-born residents of Victoria celebrated their birthdays on the same day last week. Ninety-eight-year-old Harry Louis Salmon, above, was born in London and came to Victoria in 1884. He is a past master of a Victoria masonic lodge.

William James Alder had his 90th birthday and has lived in Victoria for 40 years. He is a city real estate agent and from 1933 to 1940 was commissioner of the then bankrupt city of Prince Rupert, — (Colonist photos by Jim Ryan.)

A CCORDING TO RECORDS, Egyptologists claim the Greyhound as belonging to the 4th Dynasty: but it is from a Grecian source that the first complete description of this dog originated. This from the pen of the Roman poet, Ovid (43 B.C. to 17 or 18 A.D.) who studied in Athens in his early twenties.

... Proving New Land's Fertility

Russia appears to be developing a new concept in agriculture which it will be profitable for Canadians to study. It is based upon an entirely novel technology. If Russia can grow fruit, vegetables, grain crops and even tomatoes across the vast Arche steppes, so can Canada in its northlands. Science seems to be extending the frontiers of productivity.

CHARLES IS JUST A LITTLE BOY—a normal, healthy little boy. But he is a prince of the realm, presently will wear the title of Pringe of Wales and ultimately the crown of kingship, representative of a mightier federation of nations than anothing known by Alexander, the Caesars, Cleopatra or any king or queen before

This little boy, in his first year of school, will live his life under the bright light of publicity. He cannot avoid it. The fact that he went to school at seven years of age — instead of being tutored in the palace — was enogh to cause all sorts of comment, critical and otherwise.

The fashion for outdoor cooking that has swept across Canada and the United states in the last few years has sown but sured made its way into Victoria. Whether hy harberie pit, portable harberie fireplace grill or boofite in a patio, backward or beach the fashiom to prepare food on glowing charcoal seems here to stay for a while

Steaks and chops seems to lead in popularity for the type of cooking, although chicken salmon, hamburgers spareribs and wieners also have a faithful following

There is a knack or an art to this outdoor cooking and sometimes many expensive steaks are eaten just charried on the outside before this knack is acquired.

The two most important things in this type of cooking is to have the meat at norm temperature and the fire of glawing coals no flames. If the meat is cold at the centre it will cook to toughness on the outside before the heat penetrates to the inside.

One expert claims that a frozen steak should be taken from the freezer two days before and thawed in the refrigerator. Torn it should be warmed to room temperature can lose a lot of juice.

A thick steak two or three inches is best because at this thickness the nuces are retained more readily. Another trick to boid the nuces limite the meat is to tollow the old fashioned spitting principle and if you are not fortunate enough to have a motor attached to your grill keep turning the steak by hand.

There is lots of equipment available these days for outdoor cooking and a long handled fork to insert in the fat part of the steak is almost a must. Big padded mitts also help to avoid burning hands Chancoal and charcoal briquets are the most popular type of fuel and hickory flakes for a smoky flavor have long been a favorite.
